INTRODUCTION.

1159007

IN a rough way the following genealogy may be said to include all those related within the sixth degree to the children of Samuel Dennis Warren and Susan Cornelia Clarke. Rigidly to have applied this test, however, would have been too laborious to the compiler and both confusing and unsatisfactory to the reader. A rule, therefore, was adopted which, while simpler in its application, substantially carried out the idea. The children of Samuel Dennis Warren and Susan Cornelia Clarke have been taken as the nucleus. For convenience let me call this nucleus N and give it a masculine personification. N's ancestors for six generations have been included, together with all the descendants of his four pairs of great-grandparents.

The object has been to bring home forcibly to N all that genealogy has to teach in regard to his composition. As a river draws from its tributaries, so man from his ancestry. The chemist can predict the character of the river from the character of its sources, and much that is similar can be done in the currents of human life.

But although this has been my object, and although I believe that the true field of the genealogical philosopher is larger and more important than has been commonly supposed, considerably transcending even what has been here indicated, no attempt has been made in this volume to construct any philosophic induction. The compiler has endeavored to accumulate the necessary data, — that is all. The lesser part of the task has been done; the greater remains. Even in what it attempts I am aware that this work is deficient. A more extended scale would have been desirable. This was begun but abandoned, — too many gaps and omissions would have necessarily appeared. Some of the material so collected, however, has been printed as an appendix. Another deficiency is the lack of detailed information, but for this we have to thank the scantiness of accessible records.

The names of the persons composing the skeleton of this work as above indicated are entered alphabetically. A number follows each of these names, denoting the degree of removal, genealogically, from N.

The degree of removal, or, which is the same, the degree of relationship, is determined in the following manner: A parent is considered to have half the same blood as a child, and vice versa. Children of the same parents are held to be identical in blood with each other. $\frac{1}{2}$ blood is held to correspond to the first degree of relationship, $\frac{1}{4}$ to the second, $\frac{1}{8}$ to the third, and so on; the degree always corresponding to the power of 2 represented by the denominator of the fraction, its numerator remaining unity. Where there is more than one line of blood relationship the fraction for each line is computed and the sum of these fractions is taken as the basis for computing the degree, which then often assumes the form of an improper fraction. This improper fraction has been represented in the following pages by the nearest decimal. It is to be noted, however, that no attention has been paid to giving value to any lines of relationship whose links are not all included in this work.

When the condition is not affected by the intermarriage of relatives, the application of the rule makes N's mother to be $\frac{1}{2}$ blood, or in the first degree; his grandmother $\frac{1}{4}$, or second degree; his great grandmother $\frac{1}{8}$, or third degree. His female first cousin would be $\frac{1}{2}$ of her father (or uncle, N's father), and therefore $\frac{1}{2} \times \frac{1}{2} = \frac{1}{4}$ of N = second degree. Her daughter would be $\frac{1}{2}$ of her, or $\frac{1}{8}$ of N = third degree. But supposing that the cousin's daughter were related paternally to N in the fourth degree, or $\frac{1}{16}$, the correct statement of her genealogical propinquity to him would be $\frac{1}{8} + \frac{1}{16} = \frac{3}{16} = \frac{1}{(2^{2.4}} = 2.4$ degree.

The following information has been sought in regard to each of the persons included:

1. Full name of father with years of his birth and death.
2. Full name of mother with years of her birth and death.
3. Place and date of birth.
4. Place and date of death; or residence, if living.
5. Full name of husband or wife with date of marriage.
6. Full names of children with dates of their birth.

At the end of this schedule a statement is made of the line of connection with N. In the case of ancestors this line is given in full. In the case of cousins only that part is given that connects the individual in question with one of N's ancestors.

It has been thought best, also, to give what may be called a fringe of collateral information concerning other individuals than those coming under the strict scheme of the work, but who, as husbands, wives, or children of those that do, naturally awaken some interest. These names have been entered with the others in alphabetical sequence.

Females appear in italics under their maiden names; ancestors of N appear in boldfaced type.

The information is brought down to January 1, 1891.

The Charts form a graphical representation of the main features of the work. The first shows the four pairs and the diverging lines of their ancestors; the next four are devoted to the descendants of the four pairs, one to each pair; and the last shows all the ancestral lines traced together down to N.

The division called Generalizations has to do only with those individuals named in the charts.

The Appendix contains a large amount of matter relating for the most part to ancestors and their families more remote than those embraced in the body of the work. This material was not collected by the compiler and its accuracy has not been verified. Information contained in this Appendix has not been brought down to a date later than January 1, 1890.

The Index contains all names occurring in the body of the work that are not found there in regular alphabetical order. The Appendix has not been indexed.

In the preparation of this work information has been derived from published books, manuscript records, an extended correspondence, and personal investigations. No small indebtedness should be acknowledged to Mr. George Warren Hammond, whose unpublished genealogical notes have been of much value.

The recognition of an obligation of a different kind is due to Mr. Henry Kendall, who in his book, "The Kinship of Men," has adumbrated new methods of genealogy, of which the present work is in some measure an exponent.

To Mr. Edward Knowles Butler, Jr., who first undertook for me the work of compilation, I owe special thanks. It is due to the fact that the work was entirely recast after leaving Mr. Butler's hands that his name does not appear upon the title-page.

To the Reverend Charles White Huntington, the compiler, I owe the largest thanks of all. The labor that he was obliged to put upon the work proved much greater than was at first anticipated, but not, however, I am thankful to say, preventing the prosecution of the work to a successful conclusion.

CHARTS.

The following charts embrace, so far as known, all the ancestors (for three generations) and all the descendants of the four pairs. In a few cases among the descendants where there is doubt as to whether an individual had issue, the doubt is indicated by an interrogation point. The figures following the names are the years of birth and death.

Hannah Alvard Bliss, Susan Cornelia Clarke.

A farmer. Caught cold from sitting on the ground while husking corn and contracted rheumatism in consequence, which necessitated his using crutches from the age of 21. In his later years, he was able to walk with two canes, though stooping far forward. His grand-daughter, Susan Cornelia Clarke, was fond of accompanying him on his walks, going in front of him and grasping a cane in either hand. He was a well-to-do and enterprising farmer, employing a number of men. Had good business ability. Was a prominent citizen of Longmeadow. His disposition was affectionate. He never failed to read his Bible each morning, and at family devotions he was accustomed to stand while he prayed, leaning on the back of his chair.

Gad Bliss and Deborah Olcott.

A farmer, member of the Mass. State Convention for revising the constitution in 1853, twice represented Longmeadow in the State Legislature, and was a member of the State Senate in 1857. He was a man of excellent judgment, was active in town and parish matters; was a man of affairs, settled estates, dealt in railroad and bank stocks, was well known in business circles in Springfield and elsewhere, and was sometimes called "the Longmeadow lawyer." The following lines were current in his native town in his early manhood: —

"Bliss, Olcott Gad,
While yet a lad, —
Love did possess him wholly.
When under age,
He did engage
To marry Harriet Cooley."

Susan Cornelia Clarke.

A woman of markedly religious character. Dr. Samuel E. Herrick, in his memorial sermon of her husband, described her by the one word, "gracious." It was her father's wish that she should marry a young man named Ely, a son of his next-door neighbor, but her pronounced desire was to marry a clergyman. The circumstances attending the beginning of her acquaintance with her husband were peculiar. Dr. Clarke, then a young clergyman, had spent the night with the local minister in Longmeadow. While walking together, the next morning, Dr. Clarke asked his friend half humorously if he knew any one in his parish suitable for a wife for himself. The reply was: "Just the young lady you waut lives in that honse we are passing." An introductiou followed, and Hannah Alvard Bliss subsequently became his wife. On the day of the marriage, according to the custom of the time, a long procession of chaises escorted the newly wedded pair to Blandford, their new home.

Ebenezer Bliss, Ebenezer Bliss, Gad Bliss, Hannah Alvard Bliss. Susan Cornelia Clarke.

Taken to Springfield in infancy by his mother, where he married. Removed to Northampton in 1672. Was there through the famous trial of his sister Mary for witchcraft. [This sister, wife of Joseph Parsons of Northampton, was charged with witchcraft by some of her neighbors who were envious of her prosperity. She was tried by a jury in Boston and acquitted. After her acquittal she removed to Springfield with her husband (1679), whence they had previously come to Northampton.] Returned to Springfield about the close of 1685 and afterwards removed to Longmeadow, where he resided until his death. According to another authority, John Bliss was a resident of Northampton as early as 1656. He had a home lot and meadow land there. He sold the home lot and most of the meadow to his brother-in-law, Joseph Parsons, in 1661, and his name does not appear on the Northampton records after that date. He married Patience Burt in Springfield, and lived in Longmeadow, then a part of Springfield.

Removed from Southampton to Westhampton in 1774, and selected a site for his residence on the hills, one mile west of the centre of the town. In 1777 he left his young wife and infant son and went to help defend his country at Ticonderoga and Crown Point. Returned with broken health, which was never restored.

Dorus Clarke, Susan Cornelia Clarke.

In boyhood he acquired an education superior for those days at the school of the celebrated Master Curson in Hatfield. Had a strong desire for professional life and was partly fitted for college with his cousin, Tertius Strong. His parents, however, thinking it his duty, as an only child, to remain at home, he yielded to their wishes. Was one of three delegates from Westhampton to the Convention of Hampshire County (then comprising the present counties of Hampshire, Franklin, and Hampden), which met at Northampton in 1813 to inquire if measures could be devised to terminate the war with Great Britain. He was a farmer, surveyor, and conveyancer of land. Died suddenly of typhoid fever, contracted while nursing a sick friend.

	4. Ellen Sarah Sophia Clarke . .	July 21, 1833.
	5. Mary Lyman Clarke	Dec. 10, 1839.

Susan Cornelia Clarke.

Graduated at Williams College in 1817, and at the Andover Theological Seminary in 1820. Ordained and installed pastor of the Congregational Church in Blandford, Mass., February 5, 1823. His pastorate continued thirteen years and was fruitful Installed pastor of the church at Chicopee Falls, March 4, 1835, where he spent five years of successful work In 1840 his health demanded a change from active ministerial duties, and he removed to Boston, in which city, and in its vicinity, the latter half of his life was spent. In 1842 he became editor and proprietor of "The Puritan," a family religious paper, strongly Calvinistic in theology, established at Lynn in 1839 by Rev. Parsons Cooke, D. D. Dr. Clarke's nature possessed a combative side, and through the "Puritan" he entered into the warm theological discussion of the time with zest and influence, espousing the cause of the Old School as against the New School. In May, 1845, he severed his connection with this paper, and during 1846 was an editor of the "Mother's Magazine." In 1847 he became an editor and proprietor of the "Christian Alliance and Family Visitor," and later of the "Christian Times." He was also for some time the Boston associate editor of the "Christian Parlor Magazine," and of "Merry's Museum," which were published in New York. He entered into this varied editorial work with characteristic enthusiasm.

In 1847 he removed from Boston to Newton, and in 1849 to Waltham, where he resided twenty years In 1869 he returned to Boston, where he remained until his death. He was a member, and active in the councils, of the Massachusetts Total Abstinence Society In 1862 he became a member of the New England Historic-Genealogical Society, which he served as its historiographer and as one of its directors. "The later years of his life gave pleasant illustration of the vigor and elasticity of his physical and spiritual manhood. He was hearty in body and mind, active in his accustomed duties, cheerful and hopeful" He was fond of the discussion of literary and theological subjects Conservative by nature and conviction, he held strenuously to the theories of the past, yet was tolerant of the methods of the present.

His writings were numerous and covered a wide range of topics. His style was forcible and incisive, and often delicate and ornate. Wherever what he regarded as error manifested itself, he was ready and eager to assault it. Among the many published products of his literary life may be mentioned: "Lectures to Young People," of which two editions were printed; "Fugitives from the Escritoire of a Retired Editor;" "Oneness of the Christian Church" (two editions), "Orthodox Congregationalism and the Sects;" "The Revision of the English Version of the Bible."

Remained on his father's farm until his majority, and for a year or two thereafter undertook its entire management. During the embargo before the war of 1812, in partnership with his father he built a large woollen mill at Farnumsville in Grafton. In 1823 he retired from the firm and removed to Grafton Centre, where he engaged in mercantile pursuits. He was also largely interested in manufacturing at Fitchburg. In 1825 he removed to Boston and was for many years in a large commission business, from which failing health induced him to retire. In 1844 he settled in Philadelphia and for some years carried on an extensive commission business there. Later he retired from business and located at Beverly, N. J., where he built and endowed the "Farnum School." This school was afterward transferred to the custody of the state, as a preparatory school.

Educated in the public schools, and then studied Latin and Greek in the Hamilton Academy, graduating with honors in 1830. Tutor in a private school in Grafton, Mass., from 1830 to 1837, when he was appointed postmaster at Grafton. At the expiration of his term of office he removed to Philadelphia and engaged in mercantile business. Subsequently he studied law in the office of Hon. William D. Kelley. After admission to the bar he entered into partnership with Mr. Kelley, which relationship continued until the latter became a judge. Mr. Grout was a lifelong democrat, and was solicitor for the district of Penn. before the consolidation of the city. He retired from active practice in 1865. In 1881 the degree of LL. D. was conferred upon him by Rockbill College, Ellicott City, Md. His death was occasioned by Bright's disease.

Jonathan Grout and Hannah Merriam.

Graduated at Harvard in 1790. Studied theology with Rev. Dr. Lyman of Hatfield. Licensed to preach Aug. 7, 1793. The church at Hawley voted him a call Aug. 20 of the same year, and he was ordained Oct. 23 ensuing, in a barn which had been converted into a place of worship. A ministerial contemporary says that he "was a peacemaker and a man of an excellent spirit; a diligent, laborious, and successful minister; he loved his people and they loved him." He was sole pastor of this church about forty years, and nominally forty-two years, until his death. He seems to have been given leave of absence during some part of his pastorate for missionary labors; for another of his brethren says of him: "He was a bright, noble, generous, sociable, and free-hearted man; not a Calvinist of the highest grade, yet a good man and a popular preacher. He had a loud and commanding voice and was one of the best popular missionaries in Maine." After his death the people of Hawley erected in his memory a monument, having a just and honorable inscription.

Enlisted for three years at the beginning of the civil war, and then re-enlisted for the war. President Lincoln, noticing the stripe on his arm denoting re-enlistment, patted him on the shoulder, saying: "I am glad to see that, my boy." He contracted typhoid malarial fever in the army, which would have made it easy for him to procure a pension, but he refused to do so. He was a lover of horses and fearless in his care of them. After many hair-breadth escapes in connection with unruly horses he was killed in trying to stop a runaway team of four horses. He owned a ranch in California.

The first Merriam who actually settled at Grafton. Came from Concord and took possession of the land purchased for him by his father. He slept the first night of his stay at Grafton in the cleft of a rock. Under his bold and venturesome efforts, of which tradition speaks, the forest became a fruitful field. He was deacon of the church for 55 years and sustained an unblemished character. Was the last to die of the original settlers.

Joseph Stone, Tabitha Stone, Joseph Warren, John Warren, Samuel Dennis Warren.

He settled on a large tract of land near the junction of the present Lincoln and Weston Streets in Lexington, where the old mansion occupied by the Stones for more than a century stood. His brother David settled about a mile west of him. It is probable that Samuel Stone came to Cambridge Farms about the time of his marriage. He was a subscriber to the first meeting-house in 1692. His tax-bill in 1693 was greater than that of any other citizen. At the organization of the precinct no man was more prominent than he. He was chosen deacon at the organization of the church; was assessor, and a member of almost every important committee.

He removed from Northampton to Coventry in 1716. Was a farmer and a man of property and influence. Held various important town offices. Was town treasurer in 1716; selectman for six years; and justice of the peace for many years from 1723 onwards. In 1721, the first year Coventry was represented in the colonial legislature, he was the representative. There were two sessions yearly of the legislature until 1719. He was elected a member of the legislature 52 times, and including extra sessions was a member of the state General Assembly during 65 sessions. The last time was in 1762, when he was 89 years old, his son Phinehas then being the other representative with him of Coventry. He was moderator of the first town meeting in Coventry, Apr. 24, 1718, and often afterwards of others, the last time being Apr. 11, 1763 when he was 90 years old. He was known as "Justice" Strong.

She resided with her father until his death and then became a successful school teacher. She had a few private pupils in Woonsocket, R. I., some of them being unruly boys from New York City. She gathered the first Sunday school in Woonsocket and was instrumental in forming the Congregational church in that place. Her Sunday school met at first under a tree, then in a barn, and then in her own house, which she was enabled to build partly through her own efforts and partly through the generosity of friends. She had much decision of character and dignity of manner.

Samuel Dennis Warren.

(The following biographical sketch was prepared for another purpose by Joseph Alonzo Warren, and is used here with his permission.)

My father stayed on the home place until he was twenty-one years old. It was the custom for the eldest son to inherit all the property and take care of the father and mother, and as Samuel was the eldest son, my father had to leave when he was of age. All he took away with him was tied in a handkerchief. He went to work for Joseph Bruce, a farmer in the same town, for seven dollars per month, working three months in the summer. I think he went on foot by way of Sunderland, Mass., to Weathersfield, Vt., where he had a cousin named Samuel Warren. At Weathersfield he bought some land and went to clearing it. There he remained for a time and then sold the place and returned by the same way to Grafton. When visiting his cousins in Sunderland on his return trip they told him they knew why he sold, namely, on account of those large oaks. Samuel did not succeed very well. He afterward worked out by the day, and Grandfather and Grandmother were eventually cared for by my father. After Father's return to Grafton he began peddling with trunks in that vicinity, going later to North Carolina to peddle, where he could get a greater margin. He took his pay in anything he could carry, often in furs and sheepskins, running a pole through them and carrying them on his back. When he became well loaded he would dispose of them at some place where he could obtain more goods to peddle. This he kept up for two or three years, coming home summers and returning to North Carolina winters. It was on one of these return visits that he told his Grafton friends there was a lack of shoes among Southern people. He persuaded three Grafton men, Moses Roberts, Royal Keith, and Isaac Southwick, shoemakers, to manufacture shoes. The first hired three men, the second seven, and the third one man. The shoes made that summer he took South and sold on commission, realizing a large profit. That was the starting of the shoe trade in Grafton.

I think he also went to the West Indies and traded to some extent. In the mean time he went into partnership with Jonathan Wheeler, and built a store in the middle town of Grafton, doing a general business in which he took for pay grain, cheese, and general produce. What remained was taken to Boston and exchanged for goods. This was called the green store. Mr. Wheeler took charge of the store while my father was gone South winters, and they were successful in business. His house was near the store. He lived in this house when he married my mother, and I suppose he also lived there with his first wife. He found Mother when she was working for Mr. Desper, learning the tailor's trade. He was always passionately fond of Mother.

Father was of short or medium height, his weight being one hundred and fifty-five or one hundred and sixty-five pounds. His features resembled sister Sarah's more than those of any other member of the family. He was always an indulgent father, but very decided and stern when he commanded, and we never questioned him when he made a demand; it always meant obey. I do not remember that he ever chastised me. After my remembrance he did not labor. He was a victim of long consumption. He was not a public speaker and never held public office, but he was a good private conversationalist, and would sit with the men during the evening by the old-fashioned fireplace, telling personal recollections and adventures. He was always interested in public affairs. In the last days of his life the Blackstone canal between Worcester, Mass., and Providence, R. I., was being constructed through Grafton. He was often taken in a carriage to see the work go on. He frequently used this expression: "Those on the stage of action twenty-five years from now will see great changes." He was quick-spoken and witty. Whenever he went to the neighbors', to the store, the wheelwright's, or the shoemaker's, they all expected a good time. Father walked with a cane ever after my remembrance, with somewhat of a tottering step. He grew more and more feeble, and coughed loud and incessantly, and towards the last did not leave the house. Brother Dennis and I used to wait on him, building his fires and replenishing his spittoon with sods. He died in the southeast room in the old house sometime past midnight.

The following is a description of the domestic life of the household, also written by Joseph Alonzo Warren: I will take you back when we (four brothers and all the sisters) were living at home in the large kitchen with the large fireplace, so high and wide that I could stand at the end of the fire in the fireplace and look out of the top of the chimney, and sometimes it would rain in my face. The oven was on one side and the ash-pit under it, shut up with a board and a block of timber to hold it up. Said block was the favored seat of the two small boys. The kitchen contained a cupboard, sink, and a long table without leaves. At morning and at noon our father sat at one end, Mother at his left, the hired girl next, oldest daughter next, and so on down. On the right of Father was the hired man, then the oldest son, and so on to the last of the males; the older ones having chairs, the smaller ones standing at the table, or sitting on the block; the small boys using wooden plates, Mother dealing the food out to us. The table had no cloth. Supper was at five o'clock for Father and the women, this time with a tablecloth. The men and boys ate supper after the milking was done. Their supper was bread and milk with the cold food left from dinner.

His half brother, Joseph Alonzo Warren, gives the following account of his early years: He was a great favorite with his father and a good scholar, and so was kept at school; but he had his own way and became wild. Because of his good scholarship he was sent to Brown University. His behavior not improving, he was compelled to leave as being unmanageable. He returned to Grafton and began to study medicine with a Doctor Miller and obtained a good knowledge of that profession. It was decided that he should return to college, which he did and for a time conducted himself well; but again becoming unmanageable, his father was sent for to come and take him home. He saw his father across the street in Providence, and knowing his purpose in coming, he borrowed a cloak and enlisted as a private on the man-of-war Macedonia, which made a three-years trip to the Mediterranean. He fared hard until, on the breaking out of scurvy, he was made surgeon's mate. On his return home his deportment was better for a time, but after a return to his former objectionable ways his father said he must banish him. So his father took some wool to Farnum's factory and had an entire suit of sheep's gray clothes, overcoat included, made for him; then packed his trunk with books and clothes and sent him to Boston to a merchant with whom he traded, who was instructed and supplied with money to put the young man on board the vessel bound for New Orleans. His father told him as he sent him away, not to come home under any condition for ten years; and never to come back unless he could behave himself. He was heard of as teaching school in Austin, Texas, and once after his father's death a letter was received from him. It was never known what became of him. He was very gentlemanly in appearance and always affectionate towards a part of the family.

(Toward the close of the year 1891 a man representing himself to be Walter Warren, son of John Augustus Warren, called upon Henry Clarke Warren in Cambridge and asked for money to enable him to go to Cuba. He said he came from Louisiana and that his father died about 1847. No further trace of this Walter Warren could be found.)

John Warren and Susanna Grout.

A farmer.

The following autobiographical notes, though not written for this purpose, are inserted with Mr. Warren's permission:

I spent my childhood at home, a very pleasant one. When Father died I was thirteen years old, but there were so many in the family and Mother's health was so poor that I was obliged to look out for myself after that. I had a roving disposition, and having heard the stories of my father I decided to go to New Orleans. The older members of the family persuaded me not to go and I was quieted for a time, but finally made an engagement to go to China on an East Indiaman. I was very anxious to go, but again they succeeded in keeping me at home. I had but a limited education. I was persuaded to learn the carpenter's trade of Mr. Hammond, which was against my taste. My compensation for the first year was twenty dollars; for the second forty dollars; for the third sixty dollars; with which I must clothe myself. During the time I dug two cellars and one well; the compensation for that was one pair of calfskin boots. I made my limited allowance last me. At the end of the three years I returned to Grafton to fix up my inheritance and leave it, then start in life and earn my own fortune. The inheritance was in bad shape in consequence of mismanagement and neglect. I never obtained it, thinking best to leave it and come West with the help of friends who loaned me two hundred dollars. With it I bought the property where I now reside. I worked at Grafton until I discharged the indebtedness and earned one hundred and fifty dollars in addition, to move myself and family. One-half of the one hundred and fifty dollars I never was able to get, and came West without it.

Joseph Warren, John Warren, Samuel Dennis Warren.

Removed from Weston to Grafton about 1730, as the following church record shows: "S. Warren is a person free from public scandal, and (in charity) is meet for church communion." Signed, "William Williams, Pastor of the church in Weston." He was one of the original members of the church in Grafton. His daughter Sarah was the first white child baptized in Grafton. Tradition says he bought his land of the Indians. He built his first house of logs. He commanded a company that marched for the relief of Fort William Henry, Mar. 25, 1757.

The following receipt relating to one of Samuel Warren's sons is inserted here, it being impossible to identify the son referred to:

"Mendon, February the 19: 1761

John Warren and Susanna Grout.

From the death of his father, when Mr. Warren was eleven years old, his mother was his counsellor and guide until her death, which occurred shortly after his twentieth birthday. His early education was such as a country village of the time afforded, and, as it was his mother's purpose that he should have a college education, he first attended a Quaker school in Bolton, Mass., and later an academy in Amherst, Mass. A student's life, however, not agreeing with his health, it came to pass that he entered the office of Grant & Daniell, paper dealers, of Boston, in September, 1832, at the age of fifteen years. His salary for the first year, in addition to provision made by his employers for his board, was fifty dollars. After being with this firm six years he became, at the age of twenty-one, junior partner, the firm name being changed to Grant, Daniell & Co. Four years after his marriage Mr. Warren made his first European trip, and two years later he went abroad again for the purpose of perfecting arrangements for the importation of foreign rags, — a business in which he was the pioneer, and which has grown to vast proportions, and in which his firm was for many years the leading one. In the same year the firm leased a small mill at Pepperell, Mass., making two tons of paper daily, and thus began the manufacture of paper on their own account, having previously dealt only in the product of mills owned by others and in paper-makers' supplies. In 1854, the year following, Mr. Warren bought on his own account of its former owners, Day & Lyon, the property now known as Cumberland Mills, located in Westbrook, near Portland, Maine. The mill which then existed was making about three thousand pounds of paper daily, and running two machines, besides a thirty-six-inch cylinder machine. He added another machine in 1863, bringing the daily product up to seven tons. In 1855 he bought out the interest of Mr. Daniell in the firm, the name being changed to Grant, Warren & Co., in which form it remained until 1867. Mr. Grant, the senior partner, better known as "Deacon" Grant, died in 1863, and other partners having at times been admitted to the firm, at the beginning of 1867 a reorganization took place, the remaining partners organizing under the name of H. M Clarke & Co., while Mr. Warren continued business in his own name. In 1871 Charles Fairchild was received as a partner, the firm name becoming S. D. Warren & Co. Mr. Fairchild withdrew in 1880, and Mortimer Blake Mason was admitted in 1883, the firm name remaining unchanged. The product of the mills has been gradually increased until the present time [1892], the average product being now over fifty tons a day, from eleven Foudrinier machines and one cylinder machine. In 1866 Mr. Warren purchased the Copsecook Mill at Gardiner, Maine, at that time making about two tons of paper daily. This amount was gradually increased to five tons with one machine, until in 1890-1 another machine was added to the mill, so that at present the daily product is about thirteen tons. In 1874 Mr. Warren bought the Forest Paper Company plant at Yarmouthville, Maine, and devoted it to the manufacture of wood pulp by the soda process. At that time the product did not exceed four tons, but it has since been increased until at the present time [1892], the mill is capable of a product of about thirty-five tons per day.

The original headquarters of the firm in Boston were on Union St., and later on Federal St., but afterwards a more permanent location was found at 91 Milk St., where they remained until the great fire in 1872, after which they were removed to the present location, 220 Devonshire St.

In later years Mr. Warren made frequent trips abroad with his family for purposes of business, health, and recreation, going in one instance to Egypt and the cataracts of the Nile. He also travelled quite extensively in our own country. In politics Mr. Warren was a Republican until 1884, when he found it impossible to vote for Mr. Blaine. He had a thoroughly religious character. In early life he was for a long time a deeply interested teacher in the then well-known Sunday school of Samuel H. Walley on Mason St. He was an original member of the Mount Vernon [Congregational] Church in Boston, organized in 1842, and he remained a member until his death. His interest and influence in this church were great. He was distinguished for a benevolent spirit and a willingness to aid worthy charities of all kinds. His gifts of money were exceptionally numerous and free.

Mr. Warren was a man of broad mind, of unusual sagacity, and of an affectionate disposition. He was a quick discerner of human nature. He possessed in rare degree the faculty of winning the favorable regard of people of all classes by his genial manner, his unfailing humor, and his versatility in adapting himself to others. His practical sense and clear discernment made his counsels of great value. At the time of his death he was a director of the First National Bank, and of the Provident Institution for Savings; a trustee of the Massachusetts General Hospital, of the McLean Asylum for the Insane, of the Adams Nervine Asylum, of the Boston Art Museum, and of Bradford Academy; also a corporate member of the American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions. He was a trustee of Williams College from 1870 to 1876.

One of the first settlers of Conway, Mass., buying land there in 1762. Took his family to Conway in 1766. Lived in that part of the town known as "Broomshire," the name originating from the walnut brooms which Mr. Warren made and sold in Deerfield, one broom for a pound and a half of pork. He was out of meat for several years during the winter and took this means of supplying his need. He used to walk first to Deerfield to procure a horse and "pung" to carry his brooms.

GENERALIZATIONS.

The facts herein tabulated are based upon data derived exclusively from the individuals named on the charts; that is, no other persons than blood relations of the four pairs form the basis of the induction. In some instances the totals are corrected by deducting "duplicates." These cases arise from the fact that some of the descendants of one pair are identical with some of another pair, and thus have been twice reckoned in the general total for the four pairs.

* This table includes only those who were themselves living, or had descendants living, January 1, 1891.

† A generation is reckoned as the period of time between the births of parents and the births of their children.

‡ In the male division of this table the reckoning is made from son to father under A, and from father to sons under B; in the female division from daughter to mother under A, and from mother to daughters under B. It is obvious that under B it has been necessary, contrary to rule, to include other persons than those mentioned on the charts.

§ This column includes those cases where the date of birth of parent or child, or both, is not known.

‖ Under A only the individual ancestors are considered, and not their brothers and sisters also.

¶ Under B, in the case of children, the average date of birth is considered.

 Notwithstanding the difference in the basis of computation in A and B, it has been thought worth while to cast up the common result as here stated.
